Mr. Medley provided a land acknowledgement honoring and recognizing the lands of indigenous peoples in the pacific northwest.

Mr. Medley provided an overview of the workshops for the development of the Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Strategic Plan, focusing on the first five workshops.

Chair Jackson raised concerns about community engagement during this process and the desire to learn more about the needs of the community through outreach and assessment. Discussion ensued about community engagement, values-based planning processes, Commission on Equity work, and the need for demographic information on the greater community.

Mr. Medley provided an overview of Washington Office of Financial Management glossary of diversity, equity, and inclusion terms, noting that this list was not exhaustive but served as a good starting point.

Mr. Medley provided an overview of values-based decision making, mission statements, vision statements, and equity and value statements.

Mr. Medley led the Commission through an interactive activity centered around three challenges Commissioners faced in the past and asked Commissioners to categorize the challenges into two lists: 1) challenges that could have been prevented, addressed or changed by city government laws or policy; and 2) challenges that could not have prevented, addressed or changed by city government laws or policy. Mr. Medley communicated that Commissioners only share what was comfortable to them. Commissioners shared experiences of challenges they faced. Discussion ensued.

Mr. Medley overviewed a list of values and asked Commissioners to select five values from the list that resonated and were non-negotiable for them for the next workshop. Mr. Medley explained that this activity would be used to start crafting a value statement for the Commission on Equity. Mr. Medley explained that an anonymous survey would be sent to the Commissioners to be filled out prior to the next meeting as well. Discussion ensued on the process and demographic data.
